To whom it may concern:

According to the European Regulation (EC) No 1907/2006, the United States Department of Labor, Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) and the Canadian Hazardous Products Act (R.S.C., 1985, c. H-3) the above-mentioned product is defined as an article.

An article is generally defined in such a way that its function, due to its design, surface and/or shape, predominates over its chemical composition. Furthermore, when the device is used in accordance with the directions for use, the risk of exposure with health hazard components is negligible. Nevertheless, using the device not in accordance with the direction for use may present potential health and safety hazards, as well as affecting the performance of the device.

Since the definition of an article applies also for the above-mentioned product, we would like to point out that is exempt from the corresponding requirements regarding the creation of an SDS.
